INDUSTRY TERMINOLOGY

BLEED:

Refers to the printed image extending beyond the trim edge of the fabric or PVC.

BLEED THROUGH:

When printing one side of a fabric and image shows through the other side.

BLEEDING:

Used to describe when inks appear to have run on a print or when two colours have mixed reproducing a different colour other than the required colour.

GRAMMAGE:

Metric system term for expressing the basic weight of fabric, PVC or paper.

HALF TONE:

A reproduction of an image of varying tone values attained by printing dots for various sizes.

STRIKE THROUGH / SHOW THROUGH:

When the ink is printed on one side of the sheet it penetrates the sheet and is visible on the other side as a mirror image.

TENSILE STRENGTH:

Maximum force required to break a piece of fabric with a given width under prescribed laboratory conditions.

PIXELATION:

Used to describe artwork that is not good enough quality to reproduce on a large format printing process.

FADING:

Used to describe the quality of the print or inks after being exposed to the elements of light for a number of months.

CONTAMINATION:

GSM:

MATERIALS

BUNTING:

Traditional flag material woven from 100% Polyester spun yarn. This type of material is commonly used throughout the flag industry worldwide.

ULTRASHEEN:

A self-locking 3-yarn warp-knit flag material made from 100% polyester filament yarn with gloss finish. It is lightweight and durable. Due to its construction and speed of production, it is most economical to produce and brings down the cost of flags considerably.

RIBTEX:

This revolutionary flag material is unique, having been developed to suit extreme conditions and where price is a factor. It is self-locking warp-knit with small-reinforced "holes" and ribs knitted into the material for better airflow and strength. The unique design requires no hems or stitching, further reducing the cost. Ideally suited for vertical flags.

BANNERWEAVE:

An exceptionally strong, medium weight 100% Polyester woven material specifically for banners. It has a matt finish, which does not reflect light yet colours appear extremely bright.

SATIN KNIT:

A material ideally suited for both screen and digital print. This material looks and feels like satin but is more economical. Ideal for quality indoor point-of-sale material.

PONGEE:

Used mainly for desk / table flags.

PVC:

We use PVC, which can be printed on both sides without the image showing through. This material prints well in both spot colours and CMYK.

GAZEBO CANVAS:

Water resistant coated Polyester material.
